New Work Culture

to get equipped for more flexible occupations

WHY?

The NWC project aims to address one of the major challenges facing European nations and the world of work in the near future: the need for flexibility and adaptability.

The aim is to contribute to the development of innovative solutions for telework: the emphasis is on strengthening the interconnection between all actors involved in a company, the need to equip oneself with soft skills, the harmony between private and professional life.

WHAT?

Expected outcomes:

All stakeholders are led to rethink their working environment and new modes of collaboration.

The soft skills developed by employees, both in terms of organization and ability to react, are valued and encouraged.

New tools and modes of operation are designed and tested, while existing good practices are disseminated beyond project's direct beneficiaries

HOW?

Bringing together transnational practices to build curriculum, skills and knowledge needed to develop a new work culture.

Developing and piloting a training framework and tools to enhance flexibility and soft skills at work.

Building new challenges for everyone.

Disseminating achieved results with a view to mainstreaming good practices to organisations, companies, HR and employees.
